The Police Beats of London.

The total length of the streets and roads regularly patrolled by the metropolitan police of the city of London is not less than 6,708 miles, or equal to the distance, in a direct line from London across the Atlantic and the continent of North America, to San Francisco! This length is divided into 921 day beats and 3,126 night beats—the average length of the day beats all over the metropolitan district being about seven and a half miles, and of the night beats a little over two miles—though they are, of course, much shorter where the population is the most dense.

The beats are all numbered and entered in a register, which can be referred to at any time. This register shows the streets, roads, squares, &c., in each beat, and the time required to pass over it at the rate of two-and-a-half miles an hour. A sergeant has the charge of each section, and of the men doing duty in it; he is responsible for the proper conduct of the men, and, to satisfy himself that they are doing their duty properly, he is constantly patrolling the section. As a check upon the sergeant and the men working under him, the inspector visits the sub-division at different points during day and night, the superintendent keeping a vigilant eye upon the working of the entire division; while, as a check upon the whole, the commissioners and district superintendents either make inspection of the divisions in person, or send out special officers from Whitehall to report as to the manner in which the whole duty is done.

It will be observed, from the much larger number of night beats than of those in the day, that the patrol work of the police is principally done at night—night being the time of danger, and consequently of watching. In round numbers, two-thirds of the whole force are employed by night and one-third by day; the men taking their turns on both kinds of duty. The night constables go on duty at 10 p. m., and remain until 6 a. m., when the duty begins. The whole service is arranged by reliefs, each man taking his turn of eight months' night duty and four months' day duty in the year. It is also arranged that the force patrolling the principal thoroughfares shall be greater at certain hours than at others, the largest number being on duty between seven and ten in the evening; long experience having shown that it is between these hours that the greatest number of thefts and depredations are attempted, as well as because the streets are then the most disorderly, by reason of the number of drunken people abroad.

And now observe what the routine duties expected to be performed by the police constable on patrol. These are carefully laid down for him in his book of "General Regulations, Instructions and Orders," the details of which he is required to master, to remember and to carry out. He is informed at the outset, that the principal object of the institution of the force is the prevention of crime.

"To this end," (says the Order Book) every effort of the police is to be directed. The security of person and property, the preservation of public tranquility, and all the other objects of a police establishment will thus be better effected than by the detection and punishment of the offender after he has succeeded in committing the crime. This should constantly be kept in mind by every member of the police force, as the guide for his own conduct. The police should endeavor to distinguish themselves by such vigilance and activity as may render it extremely difficult for any one to commit a crime within that portion of the town under their charge."

In carrying out these general instructions, the men on patrol are directed to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the geography of their respective sections, and with the several streets, thoroughfares, courts and houses. The police constable is even "expected to possess such a knowledge of the inhabitants of each house as to enable him to recognize their persons, and thus prevent mistakes and be enabled to render assistance to the inhabitants when called upon to do so." He has to see to the proper fastening of the doors and windows of the houses along his beat, with a view to the better security of the inmates. He is to observe whether coal-holes, trap-doors, or other places on or near the footway are securely covered over, and report when they are not so, in order that this cause of danger to the public may be removed. He is to observe the conduct of any suspicious person hanging about a house, and to take notice of any one carrying away parcels or bundles from it at unseasonable hours under suspicious circumstances. He is to pay particular attention to public houses and beer shops, which, however, he is not to enter except in the immediate execution of his duty. He is to report all nuisances in the streets, courts or thoroughfares, that steps may be taken for their removal. He is also, among his other various duties by day and night, to look after beggars, tramps and street nuisances; to watch letter pillars and street lamps (reporting whether they are properly lighted or not); to check the nuisance of smoky chimneys and street noises; to prevent the solicitation of prostitutes; to seize stray dogs; to take charge of lost children; to remove destitute persons from the streets; to carry accident cases to the hospital; to report dangerous houses or structures; to watch the outbreak of fires, and assist in their extinction before the arrival of the fire brigade; to take charge of exposed property at fires; to seize obscene prints and publications, and charge the persons offering them for sale before the magistrates; to prevent indecencies and offences against public morality generally; to charge disorderly persons obstructing thoroughfares or causing breaches of the peace; on all of which subjects the police have special and distinct instructions.

The Commissioner takes care to impress upon the minds of his men the necessity of performing these various, difficult and often delicate duties with "perfect command of temper." They are cautioned "not to use irritating language even to those offending against the law." They are not to interfere necessarily, but when it is their duty to act, they are to do so with decision and boldness. "The police," says the order, "are not to use language towards persons in their custody calculated to provoke them; such conduct always creates resistance in the prisoner, and a hostile feeling among the persons present towards the police." And again: "The more respectful and civil the police are on all occasions, the more they will be respected and supported by the public in the proper execution of their duty."

Street Car Conductors.

MOVEMENTS FOR THEIR SOCIAL ELEVATION—THEIR SUFFERINGS, MANNERS, AND CUSTOMS.

From the Chicago Tribune.

The thought must have occurred to all of us that here was an institution, the street car conductor, which has never been properly estimated. Why has he been permitted to languish in the intolerable obscurity of the rear platform, while so many of his fellow-beings holding positions, have been hoisted aloft to the dizzy eminence of a newspaper paragraph? The ornamental policemen at the crossings have been presented with gold-headed canes. The captains of precincts have their buggies. Railroad officials of all degrees of importance have been recognized. The foreman of the barber-shop has had his testimonial razor and brush. The gentlemanly bar-keeper, the gentlemanly usher, the gentlemanly hotel clerk, the popular dry goods man, the affable peanut vender, the retiring partner of a flourishing business, the prosperous actor, the wealthy treasurer, the rising alderman, the virtuous supervisor, the courteous bailiff, have, each and all, been made recipients of tokens of esteem from time to time. And now comes at last the indispensible but long despised conductor, claiming that he, too, is a man, and has rights. In the language of the indignant correspondent, we may say, "why, in the name of a justice-loving community, has not this been done before?"

Let us consider the street car conductor as he is. Look at him as he stands in that attitude so familiar to all men and women, his left hand upon the check-string and his right forefinger extended, beckoning to all the world to take a ride. Of all human institutions he is the most familiar to the eyes of men and the least regarded. His existence is a hopeless succession of round trips; and yet who knows but what he has aspirations, which are constantly being checked at every crossing by a selfish world.

Since the introduction of the punch-ticket system, he has been cruelly deprived of the only chance of promotion which was left open to him. Probably we shall never again hear of a street car conductor rising to the dignity of an Alderman. He is always open to suspicion. He is supposed to be perpetually stealing from the company, and there is a detective in every car-load who watches him.

Patience and politeness are virtues which he must cultivate. He is there at the beck and call of everybody. Old gentlemen shake their sticks at him; ladies frown upon him when the car moves an inch over the crossing; newsboys holler after him. The relations of parent and child are reversed. His own offspring may shout to him to stop that car, and may threaten to have him dismissed for slowness, so that he dare not inflict that punishment which such treatment of a father deserves. He is not sovereign on his own quarter-deck. Not he, but the driver, is the real ruler of the car, and the humors and whims of that petty autocrat have to be consulted. An unwilling driver means a ruined conductor. It is impossible for him to make his trips on time. The car will jump the track and casualties will occur. So the driver has to be liquored. He has to be petted and indulged. Who has not noticed the blandishments of the conductor to this potentate of the front end of the car? He carries forward for him the little bit of board which the company concedes to man's desire to sit down. He calls him George, and makes suggestions; he does not give orders. In fact he occupies the most terrible position that men know, that of being subject to an inferior.

Whether the conductor ever sits down to dine at a table, is a disputed point. Generally, his nearest approach to dinner seems to consist in the extrication from some dark recess under the seat of a greasy paper parcel, which, when unfolded, turns out to contain invariably pie and pickles. These he devours in silence, choking them down, and, wiping his mouth with his hand, and at the same time giving a supreme gulp, remarks, "Well, George, suppose you shake them up?" Never having time to read the papers he is as ignorant as a fish concerning political affairs. It is nothing to him whether Napoleon wants peace or war, so long as the Old Man at the barn does not grumble. It is nothing to him whether greenbacks reach par. All he aspires to do is to reach Robey street on time. The only recreation he has is the regulation of his watch—a cheap silver affair—which was all his purse permits him to buy. This watch needs constant comparison with the standards, and, since it is so often corrected, is considered authoritative by passengers, who say "Give me your time!" as in old days they used to say "Give me your snuff box!"

He has no footing in society. If he dare to smile in the face of a young lady while he takes her fare, an indignant letter appears in the paper about him next day. If he ask twice for a fare from the same individual, a complaint is made at the office. If he neglect one it is sure to be that of a female detective, and he is dismissed. He can never hope to be on easy and familiar terms with any class of people, except Aldermen and ushers of theaters. The former tolerate him, and ask for a chew, and the latter reciprocate his favors. It is time that the Ishmaelite should have his claims to public recognition considered. A step has been taken in the right direction. We give the announcement prominence in the hope that it may lead to the organization of some association for the protection and promotion of the interests of the conductor—that ephemeral creature among toilers, who enters on his duties to-day, with watch and badge and punch; who is doubtful about the streets for a season, but in a short time learns the names of the tributaries of Randolph or Madison; who soon pats the back of the ladies with perfect aplomb; who struts up and down his little stage for a couple of weeks, and then suddenly disappears missed by none, and gone from sight forever.

Descending a Yosemite Cliff.

THRILLING EXPERIENCE OF AN OLD ONE.
[Rev. J. Peate's California Correspondence of the Youngstown (Ohio) Courier.]

Finding the guide thoroughly acquainted with the country, we engaged him to take us next morning to a mountain top called the Centinal Dome, 8,300 feet above the sea. The view from it is grand beyond description. From thence we went about a mile from Glacier Point, and had our first view of the valley from a perpendicular cliff 3,705 feet above the plain below. I never before had such a mixed feeling of awe, sublimity, power and my own littleness. I was afraid to trust myself to look over—there seemed to be an awful and mysterious attraction. The abyss was drawing and charming me. Yet, a little, pale, nervous-looking woman of the party crept out, and, for a long time looked over, until we urged her to come away. I then ventured to creep out and look down. It was less than a mile to the cliff on the opposite side of the valley; midway I saw what seemed to be a garden, in which I saw two small whitish-looking objects. I could not make out what they were until I looked at them through my field-glass when I found them to be a yoke of oxen standing before a plow. This will give some idea of the elevation at which we stood. The little unpainted hotel on the valley was within a mile and a half of us; it was nineteen or twenty to follow the trail to the same point.

I said to the guide, "Can't we get down at some point, and not have to endure so long a ride?" He said there was a point about a mile from there at which a descent could be made, though he had never tried it, but two or three had. So we went to the place. It is 4,000 feet higher than the valley. The way looked smooth, though very steep. The guide said it was possible for us to go down. Who could doubt it? But he could not go with us. He must go on a hunt next morning. Gen. Howard and wife were of the party; besides him were three more of us, three men and two women in all. So we resolved to go down the dreadful way. One of the women hesitated, and soon all but myself abandoned the enterprise. So they wished me success, and I began the descent alone, little thinking what was before me, but in full confidence that in an hour I would be down in the valley. It was 1.30. I went down rapidly, as the first part of the way was easy. At the end of an hour I found myself about, as I thought, half way down. The sun at first poured down on me. Then the clouds came over the valley. I then came to a precipice and walls of rock on both sides. For a time I could see no way down. I crept about, with all caution, on hands and knees. I peered over frightful places. To turn back I was ashamed. I let myself down the rocks by the branches of bushes. At the top it was about two feet broad and as steep as a gothic roof. A wall of rock arose on my right, and on my left a chasm. At about half way to the bottom the rock became so narrow there was not space enough for my body to lie upon, and no place for my fingers or toes to hold on. I was in a fix. To attempt to descend further would be madness and death. With the greatest effort I managed to turn on my face to return. In so doing my field-glass got under my breast on the rock, making my position dangerous; and it required all the strength I had to remount the rock. I felt exhausted, and stretched myself in a crevice and breathed, and preached caution and coolness to myself for half an hour. Before this the rain began to fall, the lightning flashed, and the thunder reverberated in the valley below me. It was one of the wildest and grandest scenes of my life, though I was not in the best condition for enjoying it, being thoroughly water-soaked. I reached the valley after five o'clock. I was informed by the guides whom I met in the little hotel at the foot of the cliff, that I was the first traveller that ever entered the valley by that way, alone. I know that the effort was the greatest physical exertion of my life.

Perilous Ascent of a Church Steeple.

St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark, has a steeple surmounted by a ball, on which is a cross. The top of the cross is two hundred and fifteen feet above the surface of the ground, the height being but five feet short of that of Bunker Hill monument. The steeple is of wood, square at the base and tapering at the point. Along each angle, from the base to the point, are nailed at a distance of four feet apart ornamental knobs of wood.

All this wood being weather beaten, in the course of time rots, especially the knobs and the cross, which present many small angles, so that it becomes necessary to attend now and then to the repairing of these parts.

To erect a staging for the purpose, when a man of sufficient daring and coolness might climb and do the work, would not be the most economical method. Such men are rare, but they are to be found. The price charged for each ascent is usually twenty-five dollars. The risk does not consist merely in the danger of becoming giddy and demoralized while clinging in mid-air to the outside of a steeple, and while the neighbors and passers-by are collecting in groups below and gazing upward with bated breath and trembling knees, at the climber; he must go up by clinging fast and hard to what he finds; and what he must cling to are these very knobs, rotting and weakening in the weather, and finally, to the cross, already decayed and almost ready to drop. The man who does this work in Newark is Mr. Frank Jacobus.

One day last month he was engaged to make an ascent of the cathedral steeple, for the purpose of removing the old cross and replacing it with a new one. Going up inside the steeple to the highest admissable point, he reached out from the narrow window and felt one of the knobs to test its strength. Judging it to be strong enough, he swung himself out by it, and, scrambling up, caught hold of the next higher knob and rested his foot upon the lower one. So far all right. He glanced around him, and then looked up along the line of knobs that reached far up to the ball and cross, marking his hazardous way. It was something of an experiment. Were the other knobs, too, strong enough? Carefully and quickly he scrambled up and felt of the knob next higher. It seemed to have sufficient strength. He pulled upon it. It bore his weight, and up he went. Gathering confidence, he made his tests and drew his conclusions rapidly. He went up more and more quickly, at last scarcely caring to try the strength of the knobs before trusting his weight to them. Already two-thirds of the steeple was climbed. A few more efforts and his hand would be clinging to the cross. He reached forth to raise himself. A slight scraping sound reached his keen ear, even in the breeze blowing strongly about his ears. The knob had moved under his pull, was giving way. A mist spread before him. He felt himself falling backward. With a convulsive effort that lamed his back, he clutched at something and brought himself forward again, and down he slid. His presence of mind had not once left him. He even tested the knobs as he slid over them, to see where he might trust to stop himself with the momentum of his falling. Gradually he even lessened the momentum. Then he fastened his grip upon a knob. It held him, and he was safe. The sigh that went up from the observers in

Prussian Outrages.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.

M. Galliardit telegraphs from Paris last night that in spite of the orders given by the commanders of the enemies' armies the Prussian invasion of 1870 surpasses in horror that of 1814. Accounts are received from all sides of pillage, devastation and of summary executions caused by the resistance of the peasants to the invasions of their homes. The Prussians concede to them no rights of defense. The Uhlans have all committed depredations only worthy of the Cossacks of other days. Little is said about the Empire and with good reason. Deeds, not recriminations, are necessary. It will be time enough hereafter to demand an account from him who was the origin of the first disaster.

The Empress shows most noble devotion to the wounded. Every day she visits the military hospitals and extends care and consolation to the victims of the war. All the ladies of rank and those high in social standing, imitate her example. There are unfortunately some exceptions to this conduct.

Prussian Army below Chalons and Epernay.

LONDON, August 29,

On Thursday evening the headquarters of the Prussian army were at Bor Le Duc. The advance had reached a point about midway between Chalons and Epernay. The march on Paris was to be conducted leisurly by the Prussians, as no further opposition was anticipated. There is authority for saying that the fortifications of Paris, unless manned by at least 300,000 men, are worthless. According to the French report, Lunerville is so filled with Prussian wounded that 3,000 are left unsheltered in the street. Count Von Bismarck's son is more seriously wounded than at first reported. He has been sent home. The French general who was wounded is recovering rapidly.

Prussian System of Obtaining Information Denounced.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.

Gaillardit's despatch further says that the system of [illegible] stolen into some of the church[illegible] places, where it would be scarcely possible to discover or prevent it. One or two examples have been made which will probably put an end to this secret connivance with the enemy. In answer to the dispatch which you addressed to me, I reply that it is untrue that all Germans have been expelled from Paris. A great number left voluntarily before the opening of hostilities, since which, only a hundred or so of Germans, suspected of conveying news to the enemy have been expelled. That is all.

Heroism of the Garde Mobile.

Our young Garde Mobile performed prodigies at Toul and Pfalzburg. They hold a superior enemy in check at Strasbourg. They have made a number of successful sorties.

Thiers, to whose foresight we are indebted for the fortification of Paris, refuses obstinately to act on the Committee of Defense. Count Dorra accepted this morning; this is a difficult office.

Removal of Works of Art.

The prospect of siege and perhaps of bombardment, has taught the government this useful measure. Last night the removal to safe places of master-pieces of the Louvere was begun. The precaution is timely. The invasions of barbarians are always fatal to the arts and their most beautiful production.

Siege of Toul Abandoned.

PARIS, August 25.

The following news have been made public at the office of the Minister of the Interior: The Prussians are passing through Nancy going toward Chalons. The siege of Toul has been abandoned owing to the vigorous resistance made by the garrison. The Prussian scouts cut the railroad between Montmedy and Mercieres. This body was repulsed by the French Sharpshooters and the railroad repaired again.

Arrival of Prussians.

PARIS, August 27.

Six wagon loads of Prussian prisoners, captured in the recent engagements reached Lille to-day.

Quarrels in the Prussian Army.

Great disturbances prevail in the invading army. The Prussians soldiers quarrel with those from Bavaria and Wurtemburg, and it has been found necessary to place them in separate camps. A somewhat similar spirit prevails in Berlin, where serious riots occurred, in which Bismarck's house was attacked.

The hotel Meirbeir, in this city, Paris, kept by Germans, was attacked last night and only saved from total destruction by the interference of the police. Ex-Queen Isabella has given her palace in Paris for the use of the wounded.

The typhoid fever is raging in the Prussian army.

The Prussians, who were at Stenay are now falling back upon Dun, several miles further south of St. Paul.

A special telegram from London on the 27th says: The reported northern movement of Marshal McMahon is fully confirmed. There was fighting yesterday near Montmedy between cavalry detachments of the French and Prussian armies. The latter were repulsed.

McMahon Re-inforced.

Large reinforcements have been sent from Paris by the northern railway to McMahon's army: The tactics of McMahon appears to be together up the broken corps of his army and thereby swell the ranks of his new levies and then sweep along the borders of Belgium avoiding encounters with the Prussians that would be likely to bring on a pitched battle. By this movement he will be enabled to leave the Prussians on the south and probably effect a junction with Bazaine north of Metz. If successful in this McMahon will, it is thought, strike the Prussian line of communications at Stavold. This is believed to be the strategy which Count Palikao hinted at some few days ago in his communication with the Corps Legislatif.

An Appeal for Help.

PARIS, August 27.

The Moniteur, to-day, says the Prussians wish to invest Paris but France will invest it before them. Every department, without the loss of an hour and with that unanimity which alone promises great results, forms corps of volunteers. In 1843 an important movement took place, an order which saved us then saves us to-day. It is the safety of our native land which rouses us all. The country is degenerate if in less than forty-eight hours our enthusiasm does not make itself widely known, and if the provinces do not send to Paris at least 50,000 defenders. Our national interests as well as our love of country, invite us to all sacrifices. Ought we not be more willing to spend our resources in driving out the enemy than to be compelled to yield to him his victory, that disgraceful tribute. Do we not all know well, that the good which we shall gain will be more valuable than all our defence will cost? It is not 50,000 men that the Provinces will send, it is a flood of men, whose mighty tide will aid us in rolling back Prussian torrents. Have we any right to doubt that it will come?

Appointment of Thiers.

The Journal Officiel publishes a decree adding Thiers to the committee of defense. This movement seems to be a very popular one on the part of the government. Many of the journals have lately dwelt upon the necessity of this appointment and praised his energy and patriotism. He has been frequently in consultation with the artillery officers during the past week and with them has visited the forts, fortifications and works. He has also assisted the Ministers of Agriculture and Commerce in providing stores for the city in case of a siege. The Journal Officiel states that the government is acting in concert with the chambers on the question of preparing Paris for a siege. Orders have been given to admit wines into the city free of duty, as well as other merchandise and provisions. The latter for a certain period.

Belgium Belligerent.

The same journal says Belgium has announced her determination to oppose all violation of her territory by force of arms if necessary. The Constitutionel says the intention to call out for active service all former soldiers from the ages of 25 to 35 married or unmarried has created considerable uneasiness. The writer adds that it were better to incorporate 350,000 of the Garde Mobile into the regular army. The Constitutionel says that the Prussians act not only against ordinary military laws but those also of humanity.

Forced to Work in Trenches.

The French claim that the Prussians at Strasbourg have cruelly forced all young men to work in the trenches, and in some cases, threatened them with death if they refused. Shots from the ramparts of the beseiged city kill the laborers in the Prussian army, and Frenchmen are thus forced to kill their brethern. Such acts are unworthy of this age, and they give a singular idea of Prussian civilization. They only serve to increase the French hatred and augment our determination to punish them. The Constitutionel says, Gabetta, a Deputy in the Corps Legislatif, and two distinguished lawyers, Launer and Flotquet, have already recruited 12,000 workmen, and requested to have the defense of Fort Bicetre on the southern border of the city.

Emperor to be Deposed.

LONDON, Aug. 27.

Specials to the Herald and private letters have been received in this city from Paris which express the belief that a Committee of Public Safety has been appointed, which will seize the government, undertake the defence of the capitol, and formally depose the Emperor.

PARIS, Aug. 15.

The Constitutionel adds: We must prepare as though we expected the enemy at the gates to-morrow. We must be calm, and resolute, and ready to face the danger. When places like Toul, Pfalsbourg, Strasbourg and Metz resist so bravely, shall not Paris, so strong, so difficult to surround, keep back the enemy. We are more than 300,000 strong, not counting all who are able to bear arms. Our city must be the rampart of civilization.

Accumulation of Prussian Stores at Nancy.

BERLIN, August 27, 6 p. m.

The Prussian generals headquarters are temporarily at St. Dizier. Great quantities of stores for the use of the Prussian army are accumulated at Nancy. At 8 o'clock this morning Metz was completely invested. Marshal Bazaine who is in command there makes no effort to force a passage. Deserters report the extreme demoralization of the garrison.

The Prussians are strongly entrenched before the place. Of the three new armies just organized in Germany one will march on Paris with the Prince Royal and the others will remain to protect the rear.

Rupture between Gen. Trochu and the Government.

PARIS, August 27.

Our city journals this evening has a remarkable article of which the following is an extract: Next to the news of the near approach of the Prussians toward Paris that which most occupies public attention is the possibility of an open rupture between the government and Gen. Trochu. It is reported that the Empress demanded the dismissal of Gen. Trochu from his position as governor of Paris, but we can affirm nothing positive. It is nevertheless true that a person has been permitted to express carelessly the opinion that Trochu, in presence of the Empress, had been asked to retire.

The enemy fired on an ambulance train which was struck seventeen times and two persons belonging to it were killed.

The movement of the Prussians along the Aube seems to have been arrested. They are falling back on St. Dizier. Large bodies of infantry are passing through Lunerville and Bayon.

LONDON, August 28.

The following official dispatch, dated Bar Le Duc, Friday night has been received: The garrison of Vitry surrendered on Thursday morning. The Prussians captured sixteen guns. Two batallions of the French Garde Mobile were annihilated by the Prussian cavalry. Seventeen French officers and 850 soldiers were captured. The Prussians had one major severely and three troopers slightly wounded.

A late copy of the Journal of Nancy says: That which wounds us more than all else is the condition of unfortunate farmers, dwellers in our country. Our tears flow at sight of the long lines of wagons laden with oats, hay and provisions of every kind, to be given over to the Prussian army. The fine horses which were to prepare the earth for the seed of the future harvest, have been harnessed to Prussian cannon.

Rumored Whereabouts of Bazaine.

A cablo special to the Herald from London, the 28th, says:

Letter from a correspondent at Rhoims, on the 24th, says it is reported that Bazaine, with a portion of his army, is between Montivedo and Lougy, on the Belgian frontier, where he is awaiting the arrival of McMahon. The report is considered doubtful. The garrison of Strasbourg lately made a successful sortie, and captured a convoy of cattle and ammunition.

PARIS, August 27.

Herdt, the Prussian spy was shot this morning.

Prussian repulse at Verdun.

PARIS, August 27.—Midnight.

The following official intelligence has been made public: On the 25th inst., at 9 o'clock in the morning, Verdun was attacked by Prussians 10,000 strong, commanded by the Crown Prince of Saxony. After a combat which lasted three hours, during which time 300 shells were thrown into the city, the Prussians were much injured by our artillery, and were repulsed with considerable loss. The Gardo Nationale served our guns. We had 5 killed and 12 wounded.

Emperor Heard From.

PARIS, August 28.

MacMahon's main army is at Stevay.

The Emperor is at Remonville and the Prince Imperial at Rithel.

The Prussians push their reconnoisances as far as Montmedy.

La Liberte says a general of the army of the Rhine arrived in Paris last night. He had an interview with the Empress and started immediately on his return. We may expect within a day or two a brilliant combat.

Counsel of War.

The Journal of France says, we learn from certain sources that before ordering the army of the Prince Royal to march on Paris, the King held at Pont-a-Mousson, a council of war, composed of the generals and princes commanding the Prussian forces. The advice of all was to remain in the territory conquered, fortifying the right bank of the Moselle, the King alone determined to march on Paris. The Prince Royal slept last night at the Chalons Prefecture.

In case of the siege of Paris, the Government Officials, other than Ministers, will go to Tour, Borges and Lyons, to administer provinces uninvaded by enemy.

Gaulois says, it is reported that the Prussian administration of Austria and Lorraine is very tyrannical and exacting.

The Constitutionel says: the army of the Prince Royal, reinforced by part of the army of Frederick Charles, is marching on Paris through the vallies of Aube and Seine. The Prussians must know how adventurous such an attempt is. McMahon may cut off their communications and place them between two fires. To avoid this danger, the Prussians made great efforts. They three times attacked Bazaine with overwhelming force which the French army successfuly resisted. The enemy then, despairing of being able to conquer him, decided to keep Bazaine checked and march on Paris. From Paris to Sierick, the nearest point on the German frontier, is more than 100 leagues. This line the Prussians must defend against our armies, numberless sharpshooters, and the Mobile Garde. To be able to subsist on our territory 600,000 invading Prussians must extend their lines vastly, and must disperse their forces, a thing so fatal to us in the commencement of the campaign. The journals say that persons under arrest will soon be disposed of and arrests continued, as the population are loud in exclamations against Germans and others now in the city, who in case of siege might be capable of treachery.

The people are invited to impede the enemy by all possible means. Bridges are to be blown up, railways cut, roads blocked scouts killed and Prussians harrassed in flank and rear. Should this means of resistance acquire an importance which can scarcely be counted on, the enemy will not be here for fifteen days, otherwise, which is more probable, they may reach Paris in a week. The latter opinion prevailed in corps legislatif yesterday.

The Opinione Nationale says German Journals and those of Belgium have asserted that the troops of the Landwehr are not in the field, with the exception of artillery. Nothing can be more false than this statement. Every one acquainted with the organization of the Prussian forces are aware that the first levy of the Landwehr, consisting of men from 25 to 35 years, have formed the greatest part of the Prussian forces. Not only did that portion of them enter the field as soon as the mobilizauion of the army was ordered, but regiments, brigades and divisions of the Bon of Landwehr, in the Provinces nearest France have reinforced the armies of Frederick, Charles and Steinmetz. The fact of the second section of the Landwehr being called in for service outside of the Prussian territory, has not occurred since the campaigns of 1815. Prussia, therefore, says the Opinion Nationale is making her final effort. Over 250,000 beeves, sheep and hogs are now in Paris.

TOULON, August 28.

Orinque, the frigate flagship of the Mediteranian squadron, has left for Civiti Vecchia, to cruise on the Roman coast as a precaution against Garibaldians.

Siege of Paris thought Inevitable.

LONDON, Aug. 28.

M. Thiers has been appointed on the Committee of Defence. This is the result of a special decree.

The Soir denounces the inactivity of the French fleet.

A telegram says the siege of Paris is deemed inevitable. It is even said that the government prefers that result to a pitched battle.

The Opinion Nationale says the battles have resulted in the wholesale slaughter of Prussians. The same paper says Steinmetz was beaten on the former date and Frederick Charles on the latter.

The forts around Paris have been armed, garrisoned and provisioned.

Prussian scouts are at Arcissur, Aube and near Dijon.

Information Demanded.

PARIS, Aug. 28.

In the Corps Legislatif yesterday, Palikao announced that 10,000 Prussians had attacked Verdun and been repulsed with heavy losses, and gave the particulars as already telegraphed. Arago demanded information on the situation of the Prussian armies, but the Minister of War declined to reply. The law, calling into the ranks married men who served in the army was rejected.

Thiers made an explanation of his position. He said he only knew of his appointment on the Committee of Defense from the columns of the Journal Officiel, that morning. He accepted the trust through devotion to his country, but he said he must have the support of the Chambers. The declaration was received with applause. The President, thereupon announced, that the Chambers accepted the appointment of Thiers.

To the question put by Picard, Count Palikao answered that the distribution of arms to the National Guard was the prerogative of his administration and he would not permit it to desolve on a subaltern.

In the Senate yesterday, Larabit, after a communication from the Minister of War, giving details of the occupation of the country by the Prussians, said of certain villages and towns which were invaded and surrendered too quickly, that it was hardly their fault. The present Cabinet, with strange lack of thought, had neglected to arm the people of Alsace Lorrain and Champaigne, thus betraying lack of confidence in the people, which held the country dear, for had these peasants who are good marksmen, been armed, the army of the Prince Royal of Prussia would not have so easily crossed Vosges, where our men, hidden from view, could have inflicted such loss upon them that France would not have been compelled to abandon her second line of defense.

American Ambulances.

A train of ambulances, under direction of Dr. Marion Sims, left the city to-day for Metz. Dr. Pratt and many other members of the United States sanitary commission accompanied the train in uniform. Daughters of Dr. Sims marched at the head of the train, bearing the banners of France and the United States. A great sensation was created among the spectators as the train moved through the streets. The crowds cheered and gave liberally to those collecting for the wounded.

Reported Battle.

LONDON, August 27.

A special to the World says: It is reported that a battle occurred yesterday at Rheims. Heavy cannonading was heard but no particulars are received. The engagement was probably between the forces of McMahon and Prince Frederick's army.

The Crown Prince is at Bar-le-Duc where he has been joined by part of King William's forces. The united army is moving rapidly and probably will be before Paris on Tuesday or Wednesday.

The great aim of the King is to conclude the campaign as speedily as possible.

A special to the N. Y. Times from Paris 27, says: I have just seen a private letter from Robt. Mitchell, late editor of the Constitutioniel, to his father dated at the headquarters of Marshal McMahon, at Rethel, Thursday. He says, You know I was down hearted when I left Paris at the progress of the Prussians. Since I have been with our army my mind has been completely changed. I am now certain of our ultimate success. Since our first unfortunate defeats on the Rhine our army never came into collision with the Prussians without maintaining its position and inflicting tremendous loss on the enemy. I saw and conceiled with the Emperor yesterday. He is in excellent health and spirits. It is impossible to describe the enthusiasm of the army. We leave this p. m., taking the direction of Metz, but that is no indication of our real route.

The Duke of Saldanaha is expected here in a few days to take his old position as Ambassador from Portugal.

Terrible Loss of the Prussians.

One hundred and seventy thousand Prussians have been been killed and wounded during the war.

Belgium is prepared to defend her neutrality by force.

Some spies were shot this morning.

A son of Count Bismarck has been badly wounded and a son of the Prussian Minister killed.

Ten thousand persons are attached to the headquarters of the King of Prussia including eighty servants.

Three prizes were brought into Brest yesterday. Arrests are made daily of individuals without occupation. The mint is making silver but no gold coin.

One hundred and fifty thousand sheep, 40,000 pigs and 25,000 oxen have entered Paris within the last few days. During the seige the government will remain in Paris.

March to Paris Opposed.

The Prussian generals opposed the march to Paris, but the King insisted upon it. A revolution at Munich is threatened.

The mother of Christine Nilsson is dead.

A special to the N. Y. Sun from Arlon, Aug. 27th, via Brussels, says: The Prussians have summoned Longwy to surrender, but the commanding officer refused.

MEZIERS, Aug. 27.

The railroad which was destroyed between Carignan and Montmedy has been repaired.

PARIS, Aug. 25.

The sieges of Strasbourg, Toul, Thionville and Metz have made no progress. The capitulation of Bazaine from want of supplies is expected.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 28.

The Prussian scouting parties are at Meaux, one hour from Paris.

PARIS, Aug. 28.

Le Presse says: The offical announcement made in the Chambers, that Prussians were marching on Paris, causes neither astonishment nor fear in the Capital. The Parisians receive it with quiet resolution, King William is fatally led to this hazard in spite of serious strategic reasons, which should turn him from it if it is considered that this old man has raised a million of men, whom he will never take back across the Rhine, it will be easily seen that he finds it necessary to rush and risk a bloody battle at the foot of our towers. There is not in Germany, Bavarian, Wurtemburg or Baden, one who would not scorn and curse the King, should he not make a supreme effort to come here and dictate a peace in Paris. How could he return to Germany in the midst of desolation, misery, and the population of city and country, should he not win a bloody success. His defeat would be complete. This is a decisive reason, a reason more political than military, which brings the old King under our walls.

De Cassagnac has petitioned the Chambers at the request of many inhabitants of Paris that all Germans now in Paris and environs be expelled. It is proposed in case of siege that the Minister of war shall leave Paris so that the military administration of the city can not be at any time impeded.

Prussian Defeats not Confirmed.

LONDON, August 28.

The statement of the Opinion Nationale that Steinmetz was badly defeated on the 22d, and Prince Charles on the 24th, is not confirmed.

Private telegrams from Berlin say the Prussians have three hundred thousand troops along the line of the railroad ready to move across the Rhine to reinforce either of the German armies in case of defeat. The Prussians cannot move more troops to the front yet owing to the difficulty of feeding such reserves. The King and Crown Prince advance rapidly on Paris.

The Prussians attacked Verdun yesterday, and the Garde Mobile drove them back wish serious loss. These German movements are regarded as feints. There will be heavy fighting very soon. Prussia cannot afford a long campaign. France can. To-day there are great rejoicings at Berlin. A public procession, comprising four mitrailleuse cannon and one eagle captured from the French passed through the streets.

PARIS, August 27.

A correspondent of the London News, writing from this city, says the French Garde Mobile is formed of children, and that but few of the members are over 18 years. This is untrue. Every member is from 20 to 25 years old.

There were more arrests last evening of persons deemed dangerous to the public safety.

Morning Journals persist in the statement that there has been a serious engagement within the past few days resulting in favor of the French.

There are now in Paris 150,000 sheep, 40,000 hogs and 25,000 beeves. It is said the authorities, even in case of siege, will prevent any undue advance in prices of necessaries of life.

This morning several more Prussian spies who had been condemned by a council of war were executed.

The approach of the Prussians on Paris creates most intense excitement. Dispatches received from various provinces announce a sudden and immense increase in volunteering to defend the capital.

LONDON, August 27.

Metz is gorged with wounded and the provisions of the besieged are failing.

The improvement of Madame Teschiere, reported yesterday, is not true. She is at the seaside in Bretagne.

The Prince Imperial is at Rethel, 23 miles from Mezierres.

The French Press.

PARIS, Aug. 27.

The Journal Des Debats has an editorial on the situation, of which the following is an extract: We have faith that all will do their duty in the hour of peril. The attitude of the Senate and Corps Legislatif proves that before the enemy there can be no parties. Deputy Kerotry himself moved a political truce and public sentiment will judge all who try to break it. There must now be but one thought, one interest—to repulse the enemy.

The Siecle says: It is our duty to warn the public against the emotion which the presence of an enemy before our walls may produce. All must understand that the strategetic plans of our generals may involve Paris being left to self defence momentarily. There is here now but one sentiment, that of national defence. Let all Frenchmen do their duty as we shall ours, and the country will issue gloriously from the struggle and expel the enemy from her soil.

LONDON, August 27.

According to French report 15,000 and according to Prussian 12,000 French soldiers are disabled by hospital and typhus fevers.

The Prussians are intensely incensed at the French for firing on flags of truce when sent on errands of mercy.

The Prussians say half the journey to Paris has been accomplished and all obstructions are now left behind.

Renter's telegrams from France, printed in the London papers to-day, are dated Tuesday. The Internal Telegraphic service is sadly disorganized.

The English government, while its militia and volunteers are only half armed, ships 40,000 rifles to the continent, and at the same time English people send lint and bandages for the wounded.

The official report of Bazaine shows a French loss at the battle of of Rezonville of 23,000 men.

Flag of Truce Insulted.

BERLIN, Aug. 27.

A note has been addressed from Berlin to all envoys of Prussia, in regard to the flag of truce sent into the French lines, asking a cessation of hostilities to bury the dead, which truce was refused and the flag insulted on three different occasions. Prussia therefore declares its resolution to offer no diplomatic negotiations to the French people until the Empire is declared at an end.

Prussian Reserves.

The representatives of France, England and Prussia have signed a ratification of the Belgium treaty.

The Times says in review of the resources of Prussia, that three armies of reserve have been formed to wait results in France. One on the Rhine under the Duke of Mecklenburg Schwerin, one at Berlin under Sauzstain, and one in Silesia under Gen. Torrenburg.

An Improbable Report.

LONDON, August 27.

Paris has been considerably excited over a story to-day that by the inundation recently ordered at Metz an entire Prussian army corps has been drowned. The story is generally discredited.

Destructive Fire.

CALAIS, ME., August 27.

A Fire broke out this afternorn in the rear of Samuel Ridout's livery stable, which was destroyed, together with the stores of Black & Taylor, Todd, Jr., A. E. Neill, James Perkins, Miss Hill, Boardman Bros., S.S. King & Son, W. P. Harrison, Wadsworth & Kelly, McKerson & Ridout, Horton & Bra., G. W. Eye, Daniel Hill, C. W. Eye, C. Wate & Co., Barleys Photograph Rooms, Calais Advertiser Office, Wadsworth & Kelley's Great Mill, Benj. Hutchin's sail loft, Hitchcock & Cones Livery stable, Peabody, McDonald & Co's Machine shop, Hamilton's Foundry, Stocix Hall with City rooms and Post Office; besides many dwelling and tenement houses, large quantities of lumber and much wharf property. Also thirteen vessels laying at the wharves of McKerson & Co.; Wm. Hinds and Robertson's shipyards, and three vessels on the stock, Marine railway, Dry Dock, Congregational Vestry and Masonic Hall. Much property was burnt after being removed from the stores and houses. No estimate of the loss has yet been made.

U. S. Express Robbery.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 27.

The following are the particulars of the robbing of the U. S. Express car on the Mississippi Railroad yesterday forenoon: Shortly after the train left Scott's Station two rough-looking men hastily entered the car from the rear platform. They were dressed in dark clothes, and their faces were concealed by calico masks. In a moment, comprehending their design, the messenger rose to resist them. They demanded the keys of the safe in which the money was deposited, and seized him. He struggled with them desperately, but they forced him down on the floor. He was struck repeatedly on the head and face, one blow, it is feared, fracturing the bridge of his nose. Having disabled him for any further resistance, they bound him to some heavy chests, and rummaged his pockets until the key of the safe was found, and then proceeded to possess themselves of the money. Having robbed the safe, as they thought thoroughly, they locked it and threw it behind some boxes in the car, where it was found. It is stated that one package of money, containing 5,000 in greenbacks, was left behind, having been overlooked. The trains do not generally run at a fast rate between Scott's Station and Jefferson City, and the robbers having succeeded, jumped off safely without much difficulty.

Letter from Gen. Walbridge.

NEW YORK, August 27.

Gen. Hiram Walbridge publishes in some of the morning journals a thoughtful and elaborate letter in which he takes strong grounds in favor of the renomination of President Grant, and urges the selection of Horace Greeley as Republican candidate for Governor in this State. Much importance is attached to this in consequence of the prominent mention of his name in connection with the position of Secretary of State and his close relation to the administration.

Movements of the President.

President Grant has returned to Long Branch from Newport.

Failures.

It is reported that Sage & Co. and H. D. Cordova & Co., grain dealers, failed to-day.

Killed by Officers.

A thief named John Roe was shot dead by officer Cowan, of the Brooklyn police, to-day.

Editors Arrested.

City of Mexico advices of the 18th, via Havana, say: Great excitement has been caused by the unconstitutional arrest of the editors of the Moniteur. They were arrested without legal process. It is generally presumed that Lerdo de Tejada will assume the Dictatorship before January, Congress and the President are at loggerheads on revenue questions.

The telegraph has been completed from the City of Mexico to Montery and will soon reach Matamoras.

Troubles on the Guatemala frontier continue.

President Grant.

President Grant is at West Point. He will return to Long Branch Tuesday.

Steamer Spoken.

The little steamer City of Ragusa has been spoken by three vessels, the last time on Aug. 22nd, lat. 42.30, long. 60.00. All well, though 65 days out from Queenstown for New York.

Work on Stevens' Battery is progressing rapidly.

Races.

At Long Branch, yesterday, St. Elmo won the purse for horses who had not beaten 2.38; best time 2.31, slowest 2.36¼. The 2.30 trot was won by Ed. Russel; best time 2.29¼, slowest 2.33¼.

Brutal Murder.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 27.

Barbara Lea, a widow residing in Bradley Co., Tenn., was murdered Tuesday night in bed. The assassin cut her throat from ear to ear. Two children, in bed with her, were unharmed.

Fatally Burned.

A little son of George Edgeworth, in Union street, was left in a room by himself this forenoon and set fire to the bed and was dreadfully burned and his life is despaired of.

Funeral of Edward Hamelin.

The funeral of Edward Hamelin, killed in the duel yesterday, took place at Grace Episcopal Church this afternoon. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity. Rev. James Carmichael, rector, delivered a powerful discourse against the public sentiment which had caused the death of Hamelin, and implored all present to use every effort to put down the crime of dueling. The members of the bar attended in a body. The Avalanche denounces the code and the public opinion which had slain Hamelin.

Advent of Desperadoes.

OMAHA, Aug 28.

Denver (Colorado) advices say that city is filling up with roughs and desperadoes to such an extent that there is little safety of life and property. The same advices note the beating of a man in his yard at night, he having been called out by some of these roughs. Also, that a highway robbery had been committed two or three miles from town, and the shooting at of a gentleman while going to a well to get water, by some unknown person, is chronicled.

Arrival of Gov. Bross.

Gov. Bross, of Chicago, and party arrived at Denver on the evening of the 25th. They are expected to leave an the 27th and go to Georgetown, Idaho, and Grey's Rock.

Dr. S. B. Merkil, of Philadelphia, who was reported as captured by the Indians on Bitter Creek, is in town to-day. He was assisted to escape by a squaw and after four days and five nights of travel and terrible suffering met a party of miners who took him to Virginia City, Montana.

Excursion Party.

ST PAUL, Aug. 27.

The Philadelphia excursionists arrived to-day. They spent the day in a visit to Fort Snelling and Minnehaha. This evening there is a grand reception and ball in the Metropolitan Hall, at midnight, with banquet in honor of the guests.

To-morrow they take a trip on the Sioux City road, which connects the Lake Superior and Mississippi Rail Road, with the Union Pacific and passes through rich wheat country and lumber region, the products of which will ultimathly flow over the new road to the Lake outlet by way of Duluth. The steamer Winslow is filling up with cargo of wheat and flour which will find its way to Eastern wheat market, over the new route by the lakes and the Philadelphia and Erie Rail Road.

Turner Festival.

MEMPHIS, August 27.

The annual festival of the various Turn Vereign societies of the Cincinnati district opened in this city to-day. Large delegations have arrived from Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, and other cities in the district. The annual address will be delivered at Turner Hall to-night by the mayor of the city. To-morrow the societies go on a picnic to Geeenwood.

The Outlook.

A careful review of our dispatches this morning, shows that the French have as yet, been able to opposed no serious opposition to the steady advance of the Prussians under the immediate command of the King and Crown Prince. The Uhlans, the scouts of the army, have already appeared at Meaux, one hour from Paris, and it now seems that little short of a miracle can keep the invading armies from reaching the city.

Supplies are being hurried into the capital in anticipation of a protracted investment, but as it is asserted that the fortifications are worthless unless manned by 300,000 men, a lengthened siege does not seem within the scope of the possibilities. The French Journals still talk of the strategy of McMahon, but they are evidently doing this to keep up courage. The close of the week may see the Hohenzollerns dictating peace from the Tuilleries.

Varieties.

The city schools, under the superintendence of Prof. A. G. Newpher, will begin to-day.

—Parties from the east have leased one of the rooms in the new Fertig block, for the purpose of opening a first-class hat and cap store.

—We wish once more to call the attention of our readers to the entertainment to be given by Miss Estelle Thompson, at Corinthian Hall, this evening. Miss Thompson comes very highly recommended by the eastern press, and her readings have everywhere been spoken of in terms of the highest praise. We trust she will be greeted by a full house.

—The fact is doubtless impressed upon all the children, both large and small, in this city and vicinity, that on Wednesday the circus is coming. We have known people to forget the day of the week or the date of their birth, but have yet to meet the person with memory so fickle as to err regarding the arrival of a circus.

A SILVER WEDDING.—The celebration of Silver Weddings, or the 25th anniversaries of marriage, are not unfrequent occurences, and such a reunion at the house of our fellow townsman, Hon. F. W. Ames, on Saturday evening, may be classed as the social event of the season. Mr. Ames' house and grounds were beautifully decorated and illuminated, and presented an enchanting spectacle, which was still farther enlivened by the strains of music and dancing in the open air. The worthy couple were overshowered with testimonials of the most elegant and costly description, from a large circle of friends. The entertainment was of a pleasurable character to all participants, who united their cordial congratulations with a fervent wish that the Golden Wedding of the happy pair would be not less brilliant and abundant in choice and pleasant memories.

Hail, wedded pair, the nuptial vow
To made needs no renewal;
The flame of old is burning now,
But by affection's fuel.
Still, one in one, a-own life's hill
March on, no evil dreaming
For ye shall keep the faith until
God crowns the Golden Wedding.

OBITUARY.—We regret to learn of the death of Mr. L. H. Sherwood, of Meadville, at his residence in that city on Friday last. Mr. S. had been an invalid for several years, confined to his room the greater portion of the time, but no particular change was observable until within a few weeks, when he began to sink quite rapidly. The deceased will be remembered by many of the residents of Eastern Crawford as the old-time proprietor of the hotel on Water street, which bore his name for so many years. He leaves a large circle of relatives and acquaintances to mourn his loss.

The Rochester papers announce the death of Hamlin Scillwell, a respected and prominent citizen, and one of the pioneer settlers of Western New York. He had filled various places of public distinction, including that of Mayor of Rochester, and had been an energetic and successful business man. His death (says the Democrat,) will be regretted, although he had attained a good old age.

Mr. John Robinson, a native of Titusville, and for thirty years resident here, died on Saturday last, at Kingsville, Ohio. The deceased was formerly an elder of the Presbyterian Church here, and was well known to all of our older citizens. He visited Titusville about two months ago, and was then in the enjoyment of excellent health. He had several relatives in this city, who will attend his funeral services to-day, at Kingsville.

"BIG INJUN."—A fine photograph of "Red Cloud" and his dusky warriors may be seen in Hurd's show window, and those who would behold a vivid and life-like picture of these red men of the plains, can now have a fine opportunity for so doing. The big chief in the centre with a muscle on him like a tobacco sign, is "Wilsonwiskey," or "the man with much scalp on his chin." Grouped about, are "Stick in the mud," Hezerkiar, Rotcattle, the man with the red nose, and several warriors belonging to the Alleghenies who were "transported" with their "pipe" of peace at the government's expense. In addition to poor Lo, there is Hi, Jack and the Game. The savages have some very nice war "whoops," of the duplex elliptic sort, suitable for children or misses' use, and will also give a practical illustration as to how scalping is performed if so desired, by any person who will call on them

The Re-nomination of Mr. Gilfillan.

The 20th Congressional District of this State is one of the most intelligent and enterprising in the country. It is unsurpassed in mineral wealth by even the Sierra Nevada mountains. It contains some of the most valuable railroad lines in the State. It is traversed by one of the principal rivers of the continent. It is the seat of mills and foundries, and work-shops employing vast capital. It is one of the busiest mercantile centres in the country. In the number of its banking institutions it will bear comparison with any rural district. It boasts of venerable institutions of learning, and while its soil is impressed with Revolutionary monuments and even with the footprints of colonial and Indian history, its rise and growth in material wealth and importance is one of the marvels of modern discovery and development. To represent this district in Congress should at all times be considered an honor, as it always must be a laborious duty, involving weighty personal responsibility. For the last two years Hon. C. W. Gilfillan has filled the office, and his party has again, speaking through the conferees of four counties, renominated him to the office. It has done so with a promptitude and unanimity equally flattering. Mr. Gilfillan's official course, his votes and speeches in Congress have given unqualified satisfaction to his party. His recommendations to office, the most invidious, the most embarrassing, and vexatious of all the duties that devolve upon a Representative, have created as little of local complaint and jealousy as it is in the nature of political appointments to produce. Mr. Gilfillan has, on the whole, served his party with fidelity, while he has also attended to the personal business wants of his constituents, without respect to party in the way of official inquiry and aid from the various departments of the public service, with great diligence, generosity and success. He has strengthened the Republican party in this district. He has multiplied the circle of his friends. He will be supported zealously in the approaching campaign, and his election by a greater majority than before, will testify that he has secured in a large measure, the confidence and respect of the people, by his faithful attention to their interests, at the seat of Government.

Neighborhood News.

—Corry wants a paper mill.

—The fall races of the Corry Driving Park Association begin to-morrow.

—The Williamsport races begin on the 13th of September. Thirty-five hundred dollars in premiums are offered.

—Conneautville tax payers lament over the destruction of three or four bridges in their village, by a recent freshet.

—A number of Shenango Valley capitalists, coal mine owners and iron manufacturers, are endeavoring to purchase the Erie Canal. Their proposition is now held under advisement by the present managers.

—John McGill, of Hayfield township, was struck by the express train while walking on the railroad track near Saegertown, on Wednesday evening, and seriously injured. At last accounts he was lying at the point of death in Saegertown.

—The Mercer county Democracy have nominated the following ticket, Congress, Samuel Griffith; Assembly, William Carmichael, Jonathan Frampton; Commissioner, Jesse Hoagland; Jury Commissioner, J. M. Galloway; Poor Director, James Byers; Auditor, Frank Trunkey.

EXTENSION OF THE UNION AND TITUSVILLE RAILROAD.—We learn that a number of Erie gentlemen, having the best interests of that city at heart, are about uniting in a determined effort to secure the extension of the Union and Titusville road to the Erie harbor. The energetic prosecution of the work between this point and Union has evidently wakened up the people of Erie to the importance of a direct connection with the oil regions. It has been asserted there that a large proportion of the business now transacted at Corry naturally belongs to Erie, and that an ordinary amount of sagacity would inevitably have brought it to that city. Be that as it may, they do not wish to see the experiment of building up an enterprizing town attempted at Union, and the capitalists now wish to take time by the forelock.

The extension from Union to Erie would pass through a very fertile part of the county, and it is thought a liberal amount of the stock would be taken along the proposed route. We shall chronicle all steps taken regarding this enterprise, and earnestly hope it may prove successful.

ORGANIZED.—A meeting of the new military company was held at Union Hall on Saturday evening, a fair number of the members being in attendance. The object of the assemblage was the selection of officers for the permanent organization, and on motion a vote was taken with the following result:—For Captain, J. W. Jewhurst; 1st Lieutenant, T. J Crossley; 2nd Lieutenant, J. Diehl.

It is the intention of those now having official charge of the enterprise to complete the organization and obtain the necessary arms and accoutrements from the State authorities at the earliest possible moment. In order to facilitate matters a muster roll will be prepared, which can be found at the store of Olmsted & Jewhurst by all desiring to join the company. Another meeting will be held at Union Hall, on Tuesday evening, and it is hoped every one interested will be present. We can now safely announce that a militia company in this city is a fixed fact.

THE LAST OF THE RACES.—The last heat of the race, for a purse of $300, which was postponed on account of the darkness on Friday evening, came off according to announcement on Saturday afternoon. The horses were on the ground promptly and started in the following order: George at the pole, Argument second, Sleepy third, and Mollie trailing. George led for the first half mile when Argument took the pole, and trotting very squarely and handsomely down the home stretch, came in winner in 2.50, Sleepy second, George third and Mollie fourth.

Quite a large number were present expecting to see the pacing race between "Jim" and "Maggie Mitchell," which had been announced, but for reasons best known to the owners of the horses, the match did not come off.

QUERY.—Will any of the "powers that be" inform us whether there is any valid reason why a sidewalk should not be built on the east side of Monroe street, between Pine and Spring streets; at present the lack of a walk there causes great inconvenience, and the condition will be much worse as the crossings become muddy. If our worthy street commissioner will give this matter his early attention he will earn the thanks of many citizens in that section of the city.

DRESS GOODS 25 per cent. less than cost for thirty days, at R. T. HAZZARD, No. 9 Spring street.

The Congressional Conference—Resolutions—Mr. Gilfillan's Acceptance.

A dispatch from Stoneboro on the 24th inst. announced the nomination of Mr. Gilfillan for a second term. It occurred on the 27ad ballot, when the conferees of Crawford county united with those of Venango and Clarion, giving Mr. Gilfillan nine votes, Mr. Achre, of Mercer, three votes. Mr. Braggins, one of the Mercer conferees, thereupon moved that the nomination be made unanimous, which was done without a dissenting voice.

The following resolutions were then presented by one of the delegates from Clarion, and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That every effort should be put forth to maintain and perpetuate the organization of the Republican party. That a party which has proved itself so true to patriotic duty in times of great national peril; which has maintained untarnished the national honor and national credit, which has given broad and legitimate meaning to the word LIBERTY; which has vindicated the rights of the poor and powerless, and placed the guarantees of political equality upon the national statute books deserves to live and triumph as long as the benificient results of its principles endure.

Resolved, That in presenting Hon. C W. Gilfillan for the second time to the Republican voters of the Twentieth Congressional District, as a candidate for reelection to the responsible position he has efficiently filled for two years, the Conferees representing the District in convention approve and endorse his course as a faithful and efficient representative in Congress, and cheerfully recommend him to the further favor and consideration of the people.

Resolved, That as the honest, outspoken diversity of opinion manifested by prominent members of the Republican party on the question of finance and tariff is hailed by our opponents as the certain sign of party disintegration, it is the more necessary that unity and concord should characterize our action, and we therefore earnestly enjoin upon the adherents of our political faith the generous forgetfulness of all prejudices, strifes and disappointments that they present at the next election an unbroken front in support of the party candidates.

On motion, a committee of three were appointed by the chair to wait upon Mr. Gilfillan and introduce him to the convention.

Mr. G. returned his thanks to the convention for his renomination as the Republican cand date for Congress, involving as it did an endorsement of his past course as the representative of this district, and indicating their confidence in his fitness for a second term. He congratulated them upon the termination of their deliberations. Characterized as they had been from the beginning by perfect harmony throughout, they were fitly concluded by a unanimity of choice that was to him as gratifying as he had hoped it would prove to the party at large satisfactory. He desired to acknowledge to the conferees and to his competitors for the nomination, the kind personal courtesy which had been exhibited throughout the contest, and although they might have made a wiser selection, he would endeavor to prove by his zeal in the party service, and his attachment and devotion to the principles which it represented, that the honor conferred upon him was not misplaced. They were about to enter upon an important political campaign, and the issues presented by the contest, in part, were such as had arisen from the important measures of the present Congress. If the Democratic party were allowed to assume control of Congress it would undoubtedly defeat all important legislation growing out of and enacted in consequence of the war; that the reconstruction measures which have again united our country and put in motion the new machinery of the late rebel States, would be overturned by our opponents, and the disloyal elements of the country would assume the reins of government; and in short that all the fruits of the war, which it is the duty of the Republican party carefully to preserve and maintain would be not merely frittered away, but be absolutely annihilated. That the public debt would be repudiated, our country made bankrupt and our nation disgraced, for the watchword of that party is that all our acts of reconstructson and finance are unconstitutional, revolutionary and void This contest, therefore, involves the vital principles upon which the great rebellion was crushed and the life of our nation preserved.

In conclusion, Mr. Gilfillan alluded to the fact that for the first time in the history of this Congressional district, the two terms principle had been recognized in his renomination, and that the precedent now established would in the future obviate the bitter contests which had characterized us in the past. It was now time the party should lay aside all internal strife and dissension and unite cordially in common warfare against the common enemy. By so doing we shall renew the the victories which have in the past made the records of our party glorious.

At the conclusion of these remarks, the Conferees adjourned sine die, and the candidate received the general congratulations. Col. Dick and Mr. Achre, his competitors for the nomination, expressed a cheerful concurrence in the result, and pledged their earnest support to the successful candidate. There can be but little doubt that the party in Mercer county will unite heartily in support of the ticket. The two-term principle being now for the first time recognized in this district, it will become the party usage in future, and effectually obviate the distractions which have characterized all previous nominations in this district.

ROBERTSON'S Life and Letters, Lectures and Addresses (complete). Robertson's Sermons (complete). Harper Brothers Publishers, N. Y.

Here is a new and complete American edition of the life and works of that remarkable and gifted Christian teacher, Fred. W. Robertson, who exerted so powerful an influence in his day and generation on the religious life and thought of England, and now "though dead yet speaketh" in his recorded utterances. A great, original, sincere soul, whom even the Church misunderstood, and of whom the world was not worthy, was Robertson, but one who has left behind him a priceless legacy of triumphant virtue of truth and spiritual power. His life, like a flower in its daily beauty, as well as fragility, has at the same time been seldom surpassed in loftiness of purpose, purity of zeal, or measureless activity and fruitfulness. His writings touch every chord of life and heart experience, of struggle or aspiration; they come home to men's business and bosoms, with marvellous insight and with winning and compelling influence. Indeed, this young warrior of truth, who fell in the harness, in his early prime, is one of the truest priests of the Eternal Word, in these days of so many false gospels, and his words are winged words, wafting the precious seeds of a better and higher life the world over. To the religious inquirer and thinker, these volumes come with light, power and refreshing balm. The two volumes from the press of Harpers, are in elegant though cheap form, and can be obtained either at Hurd's bookstore or of the publishers.

THE programme of Miss Estelle Thompson's recitations this evening, will be seen to embrace many pieces of standing merit. We understand that she does not rely upon the book, but trusts to her verbal memory, like the professional actor.

Our Rouseville Letter.

ROUSEVILLE, Aug. 26, 1870.

Editors Morning Herald:

During an absence of a few weeks, it has been one of my pleasures to receive regularly a copy of the HERALD, and to note the local items from places familiar to me, as well as the general news of interest which it contained. And upon my return, I am apprised by that walking compendium of verbosity, that wholesale vender of nonsense and sermons, "dropsy"—that "five cents reward" will be paid, "cash down," for yours truly, &c. In the language of the immortal Shakespeare—you've sent for me and I have come. And if I may be allowed to quote from the "Tennyson of Cherry Run," I should say, 'Tis sweet to hear this honest producer's (?) bark big-worded welcome as we draw near home—(and sidewalks.)

And while speaking of this unfortunate victim of literary summer complaint we would also add that Rouseville is afflicted with a second plague in the person of "Vic!" of the Register, who not only gives the latest current items of the street, but invades the sacred precincts of a bachelor's bedroom and lets out secrets therein contained, and makes a "handle" of the same, considerably to the detriment of the personal feelings of the aforesaid "great unmarried." And if this young city is not made to shine before the other metropolitan boroughs of the Union it will not be owing to a lack of practice of the "Hembold" or S. T. 1860 X. principle.

One of the storms of the period visited this place Thursday afternoon, gladdening the hearts of "mountain" producers, and saddening the hearts of grocers, and sundry inhabitants on the flats. One of the latest strikes on the Shaw farm is attributed to this storm, the "lessee" being the owner of a sorrel mare, which was found (ered) hors du combat, in an incredibly short space of time, in fact on the spot, by one of Joves thunderbolts.

Mr. C. U. Castle, having exercised his little hatchet on this Cherry Run Hotel, for the past four years to the fullest extent of even his ingenuity and taste, has recently purchased another world to conquer, in the premises of the Courtney House. Castle intends and has already commenced to transform the house into one of the finest Billiard Rooms in this part of the State, by taking out the entire second floor and arching the ceiling, making a room thirty, eighteen and sixteen feet high, ("this is for Hi").

Messrs. Hukill & Davis have sold their three wells on the A. Buchanan Farm to Mr. S. T. Jones, of Cherry Run, for $10,500. The production has increased since the transfer. Everything is lovely and the gander has assumed an undue altitude.

The house of 'ill shape" reported torn down last week by your "Rouseville in brief" is now rebuilding on another lease, under the auspices of many benevolent and charitable citizens. "Hughes business is it any how."

Street fights, masculine and canine, were prevalent last Wednesday evening. The city authorities are about to enlarge the gutters to convey the extra fluid during these "bloody freshets." Several dogs have lately offered up their lives upon the dog-ma of infalilbility—not papal—but arsenical. Tempting pieces of beef are seen upon the streets, and, unable to resist the same, these cur-ses of society, like the lamented John Rogers, perish at the "steak."

The opening ball at the Rathburn House comes off Wednesday evening, August 31st, under the management of the committee of arrangements. It cannot fail to be a recherche affair, for while one of the committee has a "game leg," three of the others never "shook their hoofs" publicly and we know it.

Correct and reliable "gages" can be found by producers and others at the meat market next door to Palmer & Bincher's hardware store.

While the Franco-Prussian war leaves a doubt in the minds of many of us at to whether we will be obliged henceforth on our European tours, to subsist on saur kraute or fricaseed frogs on toast, our friend Landrath claims that hardware is but a synonym of "Landwehr," and that either is to be had cheap for the asking.

The Rouseville Water Works Co., having increased their power by moving the head of their production 100 yards higher on the mountain, are now prepared to furnish families, lay dust, and extinguish fires regardless of comments or expense.

Many of our citizens are returning from the "upper lakes," the "falls,"—down the St Lawrence, and the beach, and Long Branch, which fact tends to enliven our streets, open our dwellings, and increase the "happy family feeling," that always pervades this section.

The census taker has been here, and by his urbanity of manner, squeezed out the answers to the following questions relating to our citizens generally: When did your baby teeth last? How many shoe-strings does your wife get away with during a fiscal year? Have you any tape worms in the family? Have you false teeth, or do you gum it? Is your head round or spherical? Will Lyons Katharion grow hair on a cat? Have you a skating park on your head? How does mammarial balm work as a hair restorative? And many others too numerous to mention.

Andrews & Bly are testing a new well on the R. L. Shaw farm, which promises to be as profitable as any yet found in that territory.

Messrs. Strong & Son are testing their new well on the Curtin farm (Cherry Run Oil Co) in the sixteen feet third sand, which does not look very well for the Shaw farm belt, supposed to cross at that point.

Many new buildings have been completed this season, and twelve or fifteen are now in different stages of completion.

The Campbell Zoological Equestrian Troupe exhibit here September 5th. "The Campbells and Elephants are coming" say the posters.

The gentleman whose horse was reported killed through the carelessness of R. R. Conductor, by all the papers within a radius of three miles, desires me to say that he never owned a horse, and never attended a horse race, or horse funeral in his life, and although not caring a (curb) bit now, for the man who sought to enrage his "bridled" passions by the attempt to "saddle off" on him such an un-"hoss" pitable proceeding, he nevertheless allows that he will follow any and every "trace" to discover the next man who endeavours to "stir up" his feelings by giving "rein" to his pen and thoughts in that manner.

The Carpenter and Keeler well No. 1 was torpedoed Thursday afternoon and started off at a terrible rate, flowing the balance of the day at the rate of 200 bbls. per day through three inch casing. It finally settled down and is now doing about 100 barrels.

The oil market is firmer and the countenances of producers more (?) in consequence.

In conclusion we give a few lines of poetry which were found written on the back of a receipt for three dollars, in full for editorial and poetical services for one year. Do not weep, gentle reader, the author still lives, and while resting from his hard day's labor, will doubtless give you more of these soul breathings from a bursting heart—lines perhaps that will cause a vibration in your heart strings similar to that caused by a kick on the shin from an angry mule. The last emanation from this mammoth intellect is entitled

"THE MISER'S DOOM."

A cautious look around he stole—
His bugs or chink he shunk—
And many a wicked smile he smole,
And many a wunk he wunk!

Then rising from his lowly seat—
A wicked thought he thunk
He poured the poison in the cup,
And then the drink he drunk.

CHERRY RUN.

AMERICAN TELEGRAPHIC DISPATCHES.—It is singular that the best accounts of the European war appear in the American papers. The French papers for obvious reasons are forbidden to print the unfavorable news that comes from the field of operations, even if they could obtain it and the English papers have been more distinguished for ability than enterprise. The American people will be satisfied with nothing short of the freshest and most complete accounts of the current events that can be obtained, whatever the labor, whatever the cost. The dispatches of the Associated Press are among the marvels of journalism. The amount, the variety, and although entire accuracy is impossible when the commanders themselves have not ascertained the precise situation, the general correctness of the accounts are wonderful. Never before have such great events been communicated with such promptness and fidelity to the whole world. And so marked have been these characteristics, that each party denies facilities of news to the correspondents of American newspapers, lest the enemy should, in this way, by a circuit of six thousand miles, be informed, in the afternoon, of what has taken place in the other camp in the forenoon. This is a practical tribute to American journalism of high value.

TO OIL OPERATORS.

TORPEDOES!

THE ROBERTS PETROLEUM TORPEDO COMPANY

Office at the Red Planing Mill,

Corner of Pine and Second Sts.
(Near the Railroad,)
Titusville, Pa.

Owing to the large and increasing demand for the Roberts' Torpedoes, and the late decision of the Commissioner of Patents in refusing to Wm. Reed a patent, and the decision of Judge R. C. Grier sustaining the Roberts' patent they have LOWERED the price of their Torpedoes

Twenty per Cent,,

so that every Operator can afford to try a Torpedo before abandoning a Well.

The following is the decision rendered by Judge Grier on the twenty-second (22d) day of September, 1869, in the United States Circuit Court at Philadelphia. The case was argued three days by Charles M. Keller of New York, B. F. Lucas and S. A. Purviance of Pittsburgh, for defendants, and George Harding of Philadelphia, and George H. Christy, of Pittsburgh, for plaintiff

OPINION OF JUDGE GRIER.

As I write with difficulty I can only state the conclusions to which my mind has come after careful examination of this case.

The complainant has exhibited a patent dated 25th April, 1865. This is prima facie evidence of a good title, and puts on the respondents the burthen of proof that the patent is void or worthless.

I need not repeat my remarks in the case of Goodyear vs. Day (2 Wall, C. C. Rep; 299), but now adopt them as affording a rule of decision which applies clearly to the present case.

As the infringement of the patent is admitted the only question will be as to the validity of complainant's patent of April 25, 1865.

"It was after speculation had been reduced to practice," and after repeated experiments, that the complainant succeeded in overcoming the prejudice and ignorance of the people on the subject, and persuading the public that his invention was useful; after he had established its great utility and value, and "when his genius and patient perseverance, in spite of sneers and scoffs, were completely successful, that Reed, who had before made experiments on the same subject, and who was wholly unsuccessful, imagined that he had the best right to the invention, and after purchasing one or more of complainant's torpedoes he applied on the 1st of November, 1867, for a patent for substantially the same combination of devices or machines contained in complainant's patent. On the 15th of the same month the respondents formed themselves into a company or corporation called "The Reed Torpedo Company," for the purpose of pirating the complainant's invention and supporting the expense of litigation and thus defraud him of its fruits. They have persevered, even after the preliminary injunction very properly granted by the District Judge.

Let a decree be entered for complainant for a perpetual injunction, and a Master appointed to take an account according to the prayer of the bill.
R. C. GRIER, Circuit Judge.

NOTE—The passage referred to by Judge Grier in his former decision, 2 Wallace, p. 299; adopted as applicable in this case, was as follows:

"It is usually the case, when any valuable discovery is made, or any new machine of great utility has been invented, that the attention of the public has been turned to that subject previously, and that many persons have been making researches and experiments. Philosophers and mechanicians may have in some measure anticipated in their speculations the possibility or probability of such discovery or invention; many experiments may have been unsuccessfully tried coming very near, yet falling short of the desired result. They have produced nothing beneficial The invention when perfected; may truly be said to be the culminating point of many experiments, not only by the inventor, but by many others. He may have profited indirectly by the unsuccessful experiments and failures of others, but it gives them no right to claim a share of the honor of the profit of the successful inventor. It is when speculation has been reduced to practice, when experiment has resulted in discovery, and when that discovery has been perfected by patient and continued experiments, when some new compound, art, manufacture, or machine has been thus produced which is useful to the public, that the party making it becomes a public benefactor and entitled to a patent.

"And yet when genius and patient perseverance have at length succeeded, in spite of sneers and scoffs, in perfecting some valuable invention or discovery, how seldom is it followed by reward Envy robs him of the honor, while speculators swindlers, and pirates rob him of the profits Every unsuccessful experimenter who did or did not come very near making a discovery not claims it. Every one who can invent an improvement or vary its form, claims a right to pirate the original discovery. We need not summon Morse, or Blanchard, or Woodworth to prove that this is the usual history of every great discovery or invention.

"The present case adds another chapter to this long and uniform history."—2 Wallace, C. C. Reports p. 299.

CAUTION.

The public is cautioned against employing any but the regularly authorized Agents of the Company, since the Roberts Patent covers the use of the Torpedo and all explosive materials for oil Well and the use of such materials by other parties is a direct infringment of their rights. Any parties infringing any of the ROBERTS PATENTS will be dealt with according to law and as acting wilfully and knowingly in defiance of law and the decections of the Courts.

The Company have re-organized their business with a view to accommodate Oil Men in every part of the Oil Region. They have employed the most efficient Agents and Assistants that can be procured for the business. Each Torpedo is labelled with date of patents, together with the price of the Torpedo, and signed by an officer of the Company, so every Operator wishing a Torpedo may know its price and whither it came from our office.

Operators will confer a favor by reporting to the Office any negligence of Agents.

The following named persons have been appointed Agents and Assistant Agents for the Oil Region of Pennsylvania and West Virginia

A Curious freak of nature may be seen in front of a house in Norwich, Conn. A willow tree has overgrown a small elm in such a manner as to droop entirely over it, producing a natural umbrella.

A Troy hod carrier has inherited $50,000. He was half way up the ladder when he heard it, and he just let go the hod and said he'd have to be excused.

Sixty pairs of twins less than a year old is a discovery of the census in one Mississippi county.

A Java grandee is coming to this country with his eighty-one children, and wants to secure board in some quiet family.

A curious and painful scene was witnessed at the burning of a mill, on Battle Island, near Oswego, a few days ago. The mill was the home of great flocks of pigeons and swallows. While the flames were raging, the birds would circle above them in flocks, and then dash into them in a body. Hundreds of them were found dead on the ground after the fire. The birds had nests in the mill, filled with young ones, which they sought to defend.

The report that a young man at Allegheny, Pa., lost his speech by the explosion of a firecracker on the Fourth, bothered the eminent doctors. They all went to writing about the different organs of speech that must have been affected by the explosion: and know it turns out that it was a written speech that he lost, which was in his pocket, and took fire from the fire-cracker.
